The anti's will be apt to see,
That they'll from "ring rule" have to flee;
They can't elect their ringster men,
But we'll elect dear Captain Ben,

Farmers all want that which is right, And for it they will always fight; They want some meat, and not all bone That they may grow and get full grown.

We want free money—silver, gold; Ringsters oppose it, we are told; But we will have it our way, By working for it night and day. We've got the inside track to-day, So ring men and ring papers say;
If this new statement is a fact,

It proves that there's no outside track Tis strange, and we can't think it right, For those who're wrong to rule for spite And rule for their own pockets too, And rob the Gentiles and the Jew,

THE TONGUE.

"The boneless tongue, so small and weak, Can crush and kill," declared the Greek. "The tongue destroys a greater horde," The Turk asserts, "than doth the sword." The Persian proverb wisely saith,-

'A lengthy tong ac, and early death ;" Or sometimes takes this form instead: Don't let your tongue cut off your head." 'The tongue can speak a word whose speed," Says the Chinese, "outstrips your stood;"-

While Arab sages thus impart: The tongue's great storehouse is the heart." From Hebrew wit the maxim sprung,--Though feet should stip, no'er the tongue.'
